

BREAD LOAVES
CUT IN SIZE

Bakers Figure that They Must Make Three-Quarters of a Cent More Profit on Every Loaf They Sell.

RUSSO-JAP WAR IS BLAMED FOR ADVANCE.

Price of Flour Has Been Increased $2 a Barrel, and the Supply at that is Said to Be Low—Bakers Hold Meeting.

You paid three-quarters of a cent a pound more for your bread to-day than you have for months. You may not have known it, for your baker did not ask you any more money for a single loaf of bread than he did yesterday or the day before. But the loaf was smaller. That's how the baker has decided he must make up the extra price he is now compelled to pay for flour.

For more than a week bakers have been planning to raise their prices. Flour merchants now ask them $2 more for each barrel of flour. They say it is the Russian-Japanese war that has caused a sudden demand for flour and that the supply is low as it is the war.

The wholesale breadmakers have not yet put up their prices, but they are expected to fall in line with the retailers just as soon as they realize that they must make the same profits they have been accustomed to make for years.

The manager for the H. B. Cushman Baking Company, Tenth and Greenwich streets, when asked about the increase in bread prices, said this morning:

Prices All Increased.

"Last Saturday night five of the biggest retail bakers met in our office here and made an agreement that, beginning to-day, we would ask twelve cents for coffee rolls, buns, ten biscuits and other breadstuffs of like kind.

"Leaves of bread weighing fourteen ounces now sell at five cents, but we shall reduce the size to twelve ounces. Flour is so much higher than a month ago that I do not see how a baker can make any profit if he does not ask more money for his bread or make the loaves smaller."

The five bakers represented at this meeting had numerous branches throughout Greater New York and control a great deal of the retail bread trade.

It was over on the east side that the greatest interest was found in the increase of prices. It is always true that the change will be felt more than in any other part of the city, for the densest population is here.

Most of the bread on the east side is made of rye flour and is sold by the cart dealers on the street. It is always sold by the pound, and the dealer cuts his five-pound loaf to suit his purchaser. But these dealers have to buy their bread from the local bakers, and it is from them that the increase of prices of the present situation is to be had.

Loaves Are Smaller.

M. Balenswiler, who has a bakery at No. 161 Second street, said: "Yes, prices have gone up over here and loaves are smaller. Because of this, all the dealers of the East Side will hold a mass-meeting on Friday night to take steps to form a permanent union through which we will try to adopt some means to counteract the demands of the flour men for an increase of price."

"A month ago we were paying $1.50 a barrel for patent flour, out of which we make our white bread cakes. Now we have to pay $3.50. Five hours ago we were used to pay $3.50. We can't stand the loss. The increase of prices, so we have to make our customers suffer."

"Here is a loaf weighing a pound and three-quarters. It sells for five cents. The same money until to-day would buy a two-pound loaf of bread. We have to figure on an increase of three-quarters of a cent increase in price."

"The flour men say that the war is the cause that causes them to make us pay more for our flour. But one of them privately told me that the war is only an excuse. He said he had 15,000 barrels of flour in stock, out of which he expects to realize a profit of $20,000 above what he would make at the old prices. "All the bakers are making smaller loaves. What else can we do?"

CAPT. SWEENEY DENIES IT.
Says He Never Accepted a Bottle of Wine.

Police Capt. Dennis Sweeney, of the Leonard street station, says that he is not the police captain who accepted a bottle of wine from a politician and then wrote a letter recommending the revocation of the newsstand license of one Frank Seedman, whose stand near the station-house is one of those marked for appropriation by the politician.

"I never accepted a bottle of wine from anybody," said Capt. Sweeney to-day, "and furthermore I have never mixed in this fight. I'm attending to police business only. I never recommended the revocation of Seedman's license or of any other newsdealer's license. Furthermore, I do not drink wine. The man's stand is in my precinct and the inference is that I am the captain. It is an injustice to me not to name the captain referred to."

LOVE LETTERS OF A CLERGYMAN

Promised to Marry Miss Sutherland, Then Wrote Her that It Was God's Will to Break the Engagement.

SHE SUED, AND JURY
SAID $1,500 FOR HER.

After the Young Preacher's Letters Were Read in Court He Fell from His Lofty Pedestal with a Thud.

WALTON, N. Y., Feb. 28.—When Miss Agnes Sutherland, of Cabin Hill, began her lawsuit against the Rev. James A. Gordon, the flock of the latter in the Cabin Hill United Presbyterian Church rallied to his support with an enthusiasm and loyalty which was beautiful to behold. They placed their hands and gallant young pastor on a moral pedestal so high that it was believed impossible for the calumnies of the narrow minded to reach him.

When the suit began and a few of the love missives of the Rev. James were made public the idol began to tremble on its foundations. Now it has fallen with a dull crash and the dust is all that is left, for a jury of his peers decided that the Rev. James had handed out a very cold deal to Mary Agnes and appraised the damage at $1,500. By some standards it might not be regarded as a large verdict, but for a Delaware County jury it is a crusher and it is rumored that the Rev. James will have the time of his life gathering together sufficient material wealth to meet it.

Preacher Made a Hit.

Mary Agnes Sutherland is twenty-six years old, tall, willowy and pretty. She is the daughter of Adam Sutherland, of Deland, but formerly of Cabin Hill. In 1899 the Rev. James A. Gordon came to Cabin Hill on trial. He preached four Sundays. He was eloquent, he was ardent, he was good looking and feverishly anxious to begin the soul-saving mission to which he had committed himself. He was called to the church in the following year, and he took up his residence at the home of Adam Sutherland, where Mary Agnes poured his coffee mornings and helped him edit his sermons. He proposed to Mary Agnes that she become his partner in the laudable work of saving Cabin Hill. She accepted. Two years of engagement was agreed upon, and the Rev. James during his university career which he thought it wise to dispose of before taking anything else. Smoothly ran the course of love.

Smoothly ran the course of love. The Rev. James preached in Cabin Hill and occasionally travelled to other places to increase the scope of his experience. In September, 1899, Rev. James went to St. Louis to see his mother. He wrote back to Mary Agnes that he had just met a stunning cousin of his there. On Sept. 22, 1899, just one day before the two years was up, Rev. James wrote to Mary Agnes that it was all a mistake. That he couldn't marry her, as he did love her in the way he ought to. He put his decision on a religious basis. He had prayed for advice, he said, and God had told him that Mary Agnes was not the suitable helpmeet for him. He asked forgiveness for any little wrong that Mary Agnes might feel he had done her and begged to remain "Yours truly, James A. Gordon."

Miss Sutherland's Reply.

The minister was apparently unmoved by the letter which Miss Sutherland sent him in response to this. It was a very pathetic little letter, part of which was as follows:

"You might as well tell me that God doesn't love me as that you do not. For I believe in you as I do in Him. Don't you remember telling me that our love would last for time and eternity? It isn't possible for you to break your word to me. You and mine you mean to throw me aside like a broken toy. Last night during the long watchful hours some voice seemed to say to me that you love me still. If you say you don't love me, with God's help I will try to banish your image from my heart and think of you as not worthy of any woman's love."

The answer of the Rev. James to this appeal was a very formal expression of regret that he had caused her suffering and an announcement that he would always be her friend, but could be nothing more. Then he sent her back her letters and asked her for his. She decided not to give them to him. In his case, as in the case of the trial which has just ended and they were worth $1,500, for it was these letters which won the case for the young woman and convinced even the young pastor's most ardent supporters that she was a very much wronged young woman.

Five Hours to Read Letters.

The entire case in court hinged on these letters. It took Miss Sutherland's counsel five hours to read them, for while she kept up the courtship the Rev. James was a steady writer, some times jutting three and four letters in a day.

His love was so great that it developed a bad habit of spelling.

Here are some extracts from the letters written by the pastor which were read to a court-room full of the friends of both parties to the action and the entire congregation of the Cabin Hill United Presbyterian Church:

"If I could have you right here in my arms I would be so happy. Thank God for the love of a pure, good woman. You will uphold my hands in every good work as I will yours."

"A red, red rose that's just what you are to me."

"I want to send you the sweetest kiss and warmest embrace I can and my prayer is that God will bless you with her breath. I just love you with all my heart and wish we were together in person as well as in spirit. I love to feel your dear arms about me and feel your hands smooth back the hair from my forehead."

"I love Mary, every bit of her, and some day we will be one."

"I wonder if the people of Cabin Hill think their preacher loves to kiss pink cheeks and rosy lips."

"Unless God intercedes, and I don't think he will, we will soon be man and wife."

Ducks and Duties.

At another time the pastor writes of an scheme to raise ducks, while he goes on with his pastoral duties, and winds up with this exclamation:

"Oh, if I only had you in my arms, wouldn't I make you quack! quack! quack!"

There were a great many other very warm paragraphs in the letters of the Rev. James. That young man went on the witness stand in the face of these letters and testified that Miss Sutherland was deficient in education and therefore would not make a suitable wife for one devoted to a life of spiritual enlightenment and education. He said further that Miss Sutherland had agreed to call the engagement off, but there was nothing produced to prove this. It took the jury a few minutes to render its verdict.

The Cabin Hill United Presbyterian Church is still being led by the Rev. James, but since these letters became public he doesn't stand quite as strong with his flock as he did.
